SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTR. 29.

THE ABSENT-MINDED MAN,-The phrase, "absence of mind," does not imply that the man has no mind, but only that his faculties have gone off, as it were, on a visit or that "the man's wits have gone off wool gathering," as it is expressed metaphorically to the neglect of those duties that need attention at home. It is very difficult to keep up a pleasant conversation with a person of this description-while you are talking in the most interested manner, his eyes soon become fixed on vacancy, and it is evident that he pays no more attention to what you say than he would if you spoke Choctaw.

Neither is it agreeable to have business rela-Neither is it agreeable to have business leave tions with him—you are never sure of his doing the right thing at the right time, or, in fact, of his ever doing it at all. A distinguished lawyer ence had an appointment to lecture, and he had so often disappointed the committee through his forgetfulness that, when the day arrived for his performance, they sent a man in the morning to watch him until the hour came for the siternoon train to leave, when he was carefully to escort the lecturer to the train, and see him safely into a compartment.

Some years ago there was a very learned clergyman, and when the bell rang for church, he was unable to find his boots. After searching everywhere, his wife at last discovered them in the oven, where, just after a heavy bake, the good man had put them to dry. It hardly need be added that as boots they were afterward of little service.

A distinguished divine would sometime write A distinguished divine would sometime write a letter to one person, address it to a second, and then send it to a third. No one ever cared to loan him a horse, for he was almost sure, if he rode out, to return without the animal. He forgot his own wedding day, and went oil gudgeon lishing at the eventful hour when his bride was waiting for him. was waiting for him.

Doctor Robert Hamilton, author of one of the ablest essays on the national debt that was ever writter, was so absent-minded that he would often pull off his hat to his own wife on the street, and when she saluted him apologize for not having the pleasure of her acquaintance If he ran against a cow he would take off his hat and say very politely, "Madam, I beg your pardon;" or, again, losing his temper, he would aternly chide the rost against which he brought up his rambles. While he was lecturing, from the beginning of the hour to the end, he was engaged in removing the students' hats from the table before him, which, of course, they as persistently returned.

Physicians have used Speer's Port Grape Wine, and having applied to it the strictest test known to chemistry, they do not hesita'e to pronounce it a pure wine of medium strength, and recommend it to be of great advantage to the aged and infirm; also in low and typhoid types of fevers Speer's Port Wine will be found very
